PAST & PRESENT

Wollongong was once a centre for traditional manufacturing and blue-collar industries, including steel production at Port Kembla, coal mining, manufacturing of copper, bricks, fertilisers, machinery, processed foods and clothing, amongst others.

Today, the city is thriving with diverse economic activity and is known for being a beachside oasis that balances the best of urban living with coastal charm. Wollongong is now the third-largest city in NSW and a bustling hub of technology, education, art, food and entertainment.
